Moore resigns as Minden's reeve

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Ray Moore has resigned his position as the reeve of Anson, Hindon and Minden.

Ray Moore

Moore, who underwent heart surgery in Florida seven weeks ago, resigned last Wednesday in a letter which was presented by councillor Lewis Stevens at last Thursday's meeting.

"My mind attempts to tell me I am capable of returning to my duties as Reeve. However, my body tells me it still needs some healing time," Moore said in his letter. "Therefore, for the good of Anson, Hindon and Minden, it is my opinion that I should submit my resignation."

Moore suffered a heart attack on March 13 while vacationing near Tampa Bay, Florida. Attempts to clear two blocked arteries were unsuccessful and on March 27 the reeve underwent double by-pass surgery.

Bern Berry has been appointed by council to replace Moore as reeve, and Mike Maher was chosen to take over the position of deputy-reeve.

Former councillor Verne Graham, who was defeated in the last election, has accepted council's invitation to fill the vacant position on council. He will be sworn in at the next council meeting on May 23.

Citizens take tax concerns to management committee

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Concerns about local tax increases are going to be presented to the county's management committee this Wednesday.

A citizen's group, organized by Minden resident Gary Kenney and Haliburton resident John Beachli, has been given permission to meet with the committee to discuss the 35 per cent increase in the county levy.

In an interview on Friday, Kenney said the group had asked to appear before the entire county council. They were told that, according to the county's procedural by-law, they would first have to attend a management committee meeting which will be closed to the public.

Kenney said he still hopes to appear before county council on Wednesday following the management committee meeting.

Support for the movement has been growing every day, said Kenney. Last week organizers ran full-page advertisements in the two local papers urging residents to support their call for "no more taxes and no more increases" by filling out and mailing in a form included in the ads.

Although the response started as a trickle, Kenney says he and Beachli are receiving more responses every day and have even been sent money to support the cause.

The money they've received will help pay for the advertisements, said Kenney.

He expects support for the movement to increase dramatically when season residents find out what's happening. He has already talked to the executive members of local cottage associations, and they intend to involve their members.

"They will bring very large, vocal support," said Kenney.

The group has also received replies from business people in both communities, pensioners, and a wide spectrum of people in between, said Kenney. Responses have even been received from people living in the northern Victoria County communities of Norland, Kinmount and Coboconk.

Some businesses have posted the advertisements at the counters and are collecting names on petitions.

Kenney said the group wants to approach the county in an atmosphere of co-operation and work with the councillors

Chamber requests more funds

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce has started making the rounds of municipal councils trying to regain some of the money it lost in this year's county budget.

Last week Chamber manager Robyn Jarvis met with Minden and Stanhope councils to ask for municipal funds to help alleviate the Chamber's financial crisis.

This year the county reduced its contribution to the Chamber by more than half, from $70,000 last year to $32,700 this year. Part of the Chamber's strategy to make up the shortfall is to approach the individual municipalities and request additional funds.

"The Chamber of Commerce does market the whole county," Jarvis told Stanhope council. "Because of the county's decision we're stuck with what we can do."

She said the Chamber's activities include promotion and advertising, market research and public relations. Although the Chamber has been successful in pursuing these activities in the past, Jarvis said the reduction in funding has put future operations in doubt.

The county is using $25,000 of money cut from the Chamber budget to finance an economic development task force at the county level. This task force is supposed to work with the Chamber and the Hali-burton County Development Corporation to implement economic development strategies in the county.

But Jarvis says the county has not yet approached the Chamber to begin work on the strategies. "We have to get a direction, and this isn't being done," she said. "It's tough for us to know what we should be doing."

But Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis said if the municipalities start funding the Chamber now, it might be a difficult trend to reverse. "If things turn around and the county is able to re-instate your funding, it might say 'you're going to the municipalities, why come to us?'"

Jarvis said the appeal to the townships is only a short-term solution to deal with the crisis this year.

"Where are we going to get the money? The county gets money from us," said Davis. "We're the bottom of the line."

Davis suggested that council could seriously consider the Chamber's request during their up-coming budget deliberations. "We'll certainly take a look at it," said Davis. "But I don't want the funding for the Chamber to become a fragmented thing."

Jarvis suggested that Haliburton County could adopt a system used in the District of Muskoka where money used for tourism promotion is directly drawn from property taxes.

This system allows the tourism association to initiate long-term plans because it has a stable source of annual income. In effect, every ratepayer in the District is a member of the association.

"We'd like to change the line of thinking," said Jarvis. "We want to market the area for everyone, not just the resorts."

Councillor Fred Gardiner pointed out that the county's own economic development study found that tourism is "the only game in town," in Haliburton County.

Davis agreed and said he's surprised the county's economic development officer has not yet been in contact with the Chamber. "I've objected to the Economic Development Study from day one," said Davis. "I'd sooner give the money to the Chamber, where we'll get immediate results."

At the presentation to Minden council on Thursday, Jarvis was joined by Godfrey Tyler, a member of the Chamber board of directors.

Tyler said the Chamber is hoping to get $5,000 from each of the municipalities in the county. He said it's up to the councillors to decide if they are serious about marketing the county outside the county.

He said he didn't feel that $5,000 from Minden council is unreasonable, given the number of resorts in the municipality.

Councillor Lewis Stevens asked Tyler to explain the benefits the municipality already enjoys because of the Chamber's efforts in the past.

"What other organization in our county promotes the whole county and gets the name Haliburton County out in public?" asked Tyler. He mentioned the Chamber's advertising efforts, the Destination Guide and its attendance at trade and vacation shows.

"What we do is promotion," said Tyler. "If someone wasn't bringing people to the community in the first place, you wouldn't receive the benefits."

Stevens said he doesn't think council should "slough off the request lightly." He suggested the matter be considered when the budget is being drafted and that a serious look be taken at the Chamber's proposal.

"It's very probable the only avenue is the individual townships," he said. "It all reverts to the taxpayers regardlessly."

Mike Maher said the problem with drafting the budget is deciding on priorities. "You can have the best marketing and the best promotion, but what if you have to drive over 14-foot potholes to get here," he said. "We have to put everything on a scale."

Council has to figure out how much Minden's share of the Chamber budget was before and compare that to the amount needed to cover the shortfall. He pointed out that if all 10 municipalities contribute $5,000, the Chamber will come out ahead of $36,300 cut by the county. "You're competing in pretty heavy traffic," he said.

Moore will be missed on county council: Warden

Moore's fellow council members said the decision was unexpected.

"It came as a surprise to myself," said Berry. "I attended a committee meeting with him on Monday and he gave no indication to me."

Maher said the resignation surprised him as well. "It's thrown me. It was very unexpected," he said. "As late as yesterday I thought his health was going well."

Although Berry and Moore have had their differences around the council table, the new reeve said he is sorry to see Moore leave.

"He and I argued over the three years," said Berry. "But I'll miss him and I wish him well. I wouldn't be surprised if, sometime in the future, he's back on the scene."

"I'd rather wish him good health than a death sentence as reeve," said Maher.

In an interview with The Times, Moore said he had intended to finish the term as reeve, but consideration for his health made him change his mind. "I looked at the agenda for the next five months and saw a lot of problems and confrontational issues," said Moore. "There would have been a lot of pressure and I don't need that, it's not going to help me get better."

He hinted however, that his absence from municipal politics may only be temporary. "I wouldn't rule out that I may go at it again," he said. "I'm concerned about Minden. It's very important to me."

With some tough issues to face before the November elections, Moore said he wishes council well. "I hope people give council the support they need," he said.

Berry: Becomes reeve

And although he's no longer serving on council, Moore says he won't lose interest in the community and will continue to speak out on issues that concern him.

On the question of his health, Moore says he has had excellent medical reports since his surgery in March. He has not had a cigarette since the heart attack and is doing a lot of walking to strengthen his heart.

Haliburton County Warden Carol Puffer said she "deeply regrets" Moore's resignation.

"Ray was quite a worker and contributor as far as committees go," she said. "He will definitely be missed."

Maher: New deputy-reeve

Graham: Back on council

Moore questions council's timing in firing of clerk

The recent firing of Minden's clerk-treasurer is going to cause the council grief, according to Ray Moore, the reeve of the municipality until his resignation last week.

Clerk Mary Mysyk was fired by council on April 19 while Moore was in Florida recovering from heart surgery. He learned of the decision through his family.

Moore recently returned to Minden but resigned as Minden's reeve in a letter to council last week.

"In all fairness I didn't get the whole story," Moore said in an interview last week. "The only people I talked to were Bern (Berry) and Lewis (Stevens)."

Berry, who was deputy-reeve and in charge of council during Moore's absence, voted in favour of the dismissal. Stevens was the only councillor to oppose the move.

Although he wouldn't comment on council's reasons for firing Mysyk, Moore questioned the timing of the move, considering that the municipal budget hasn't been prepared.

"I can't second-guess council, but it's going to cause them grief," he said. "But they're notorious for that."

"I thought it was a poor business decision, from my observation, with the budgets not prepared."

Mysyk has retained a lawyer and says if she can't reach a settlement with the township she intends to take legal action.

Tax group will be heard, but budget can't be cut to address concerns about tax increases.

"That's why we were so disappointed that we weren't allowed to meet with the entire council," said Kenney. "There has never been a response like this to a municipal budget and we thought they'd be responsive to dialogue."

"We didn't think they would start quoting sub-sections of the procedural by-law. It's a dance we weren't prepared for," he said. Because they feel so strongly about the issue, and don't want to become involved in a confrontation, Kenney said the organizers are prepared to meet with the committee and "jump through a few hoops."

According to the procedural by-law, the group can apply to appear before council if the budget is discussed, or if they are not happy with the recommendations of the management committee. However, approval of this request is subject to the approval of Warden Carol Puffer.

Puffer says the anti-tax group is not being singled out or treated any different than other groups who wish to meet with the county.

"The process hasn't changed for years," says Puffer. "This is a committee-structured county council. The procedural by-law states that if you want to make a submission to a committee, they are not being treated any different than Home Support, the snowmobile association or any other organization."

She says there is nothing on the agenda for this Wednesday's council meeting related to the group's concerns.

Future meetings between the county and the citizen's group will depend on the content of the presentation to the management committee. Puffer says that if the group wants to discuss ways to minimize the impact of federal and provincial policies on the county budget, then the management committee could agree to work with them to "accomplish mutual goals."

"But if they're going to go shooting off and criticize the county budget without knowing the background, the management committee will never approve their coming to county council. It would be counter-productive," she said.

In any case, Puffer says timing and circumstances prevent any change in the amount of the county levy this year. According to the Municipal Act, counties are required to pass their budgets by April 1. Rescinding the budget now would put Haliburton County in contravention of the Act, says Puffer.

Puffer also re-iterates the argument that there is no place to make cuts. Of the 35 per cent increase in the levy, 24 per cent is due to provincially-mandated services, such as welfare, and only 1.5 per cent is due to new programs like economic development and the official plan. The rest of the increase pays for maintenance of existing programs and services.

Even if the group is denied access to county council by the management committee, Kenney says the group will continue to force the issue and will use the time between now and the next council meeting to strengthen its support.

He said a telephone campaign is being organized to bring the anti-tax message to every property owner in the county and the group is trying to organize a meeting of supporters for early June.

Since the campaign started Kenney says he's had lots of people who have voiced their support but not filled out the form from the ad. "People have to realize that for us to gain credibility we have to have the largest degree of response possible. If you mean it, put your name on paper," he said.

"Council is forcing us to take the time, and we plan to use that time to our advantage," he said. "We intend to be in their face until the next meeting. It's not something we plan to let die."

"We hope the county will back off the normal bureaucratic hide-and-seek game. They have to know the pressure they've put on us."

Arson hearing will continue

The preliminary hearing for arson charges against a Minden couple will continue in Lindsay Provincial Court on June 14.

Wilbert George Dennison was charged with two counts of arson last February after an investigation of the burning of his home on October 22, 1989 at Highland Gate Estates in Anson Township.

Dennison's wife, Patricia Marie, was charged with one count of arson.

The preliminary hearing began last December to determine whether a trial would be held.

There is a ban on publication of evidence heard during the preliminary trial.

If the matter does go to trial, it will probably be sometime in September, says Minden OPP Constable Brian Dunham.

Porcupine (erethizon dorsatum)

The North American porcupine is laden with sharp quills. He has a large chunky body with short legs. This animal is a rodent which lives primarily in forests, preferring hemlock and pine for his habitation. These animals are active all winter, but will den in extreme cold. The porcupine is most active at night when it does most of its feeding. Its diet includes leaves, shrubs and the cambium layer (just under the bark) of trees. The porcupine craves sodium and will find it in bones, antlers and the handles of tools used by humans. The salt left on axe handles or garden tools by perspiring hands has attracted many porcupines over the years. Predators include fishers, great horned owls and pumas.

Guilty plea for harassing woman

Nine month jail sentence handed down to local man

by Susan Grober

A 57-year-old man has been sentenced to nine months in jail for harassing a woman he used to live with in Stanhope Township.

George R. Pettes pleaded guilty to charges of assault with a weapon, mischief to property, and three counts of break, enter and theft in provincial court in Minden on March 13.

Judge George Inrig handed down the sentence to Pettes last Wednesday in Minden after reviewing a pre-sentence report.

Pettes will spend six months in jail for putting a loaded .25 calibre semi-automatic handgun to the woman's head on June 24, 1989 as she was on the phone with police. He told her, "Hang up or you're dead."

He received a suspended sentence and three months probation for the mischief charge, for dragging the woman's phone line out of the wall and severing the outline line with a pair of cutters on September 23, 1989. This was done after the woman had phoned police.

During the term of probation, Pettes must have no contact with the woman, and take counselling for alcohol abuse and spousal abuse.

Pettes was sentenced to three months consecutive for the first break, enter and theft charge, and three months concurrent for the other two counts of break, enter and theft.

In these three occurrences, Pettes broke into the woman's home and took items which include a shotgun, a brass wall plate, a banjo, a Pioneer chainsaw, a Black and Decker Skilsaw, a Yamaha outboard motor, and a tape recorder.

Before the sentencing, defence lawyer Brad Johnston said Pettes had worked a great deal on the home when the couple were living together. When they broke up, he felt "ousted" and removed the items for compensation, said Johnston.

He also said the woman didn't report the assault or mischief occurrences until months later, when the items were removed from the home.

Johnston asked for a three-to-six-month sentence for Pettes, who has already spent a month in custody as a result of the charges.

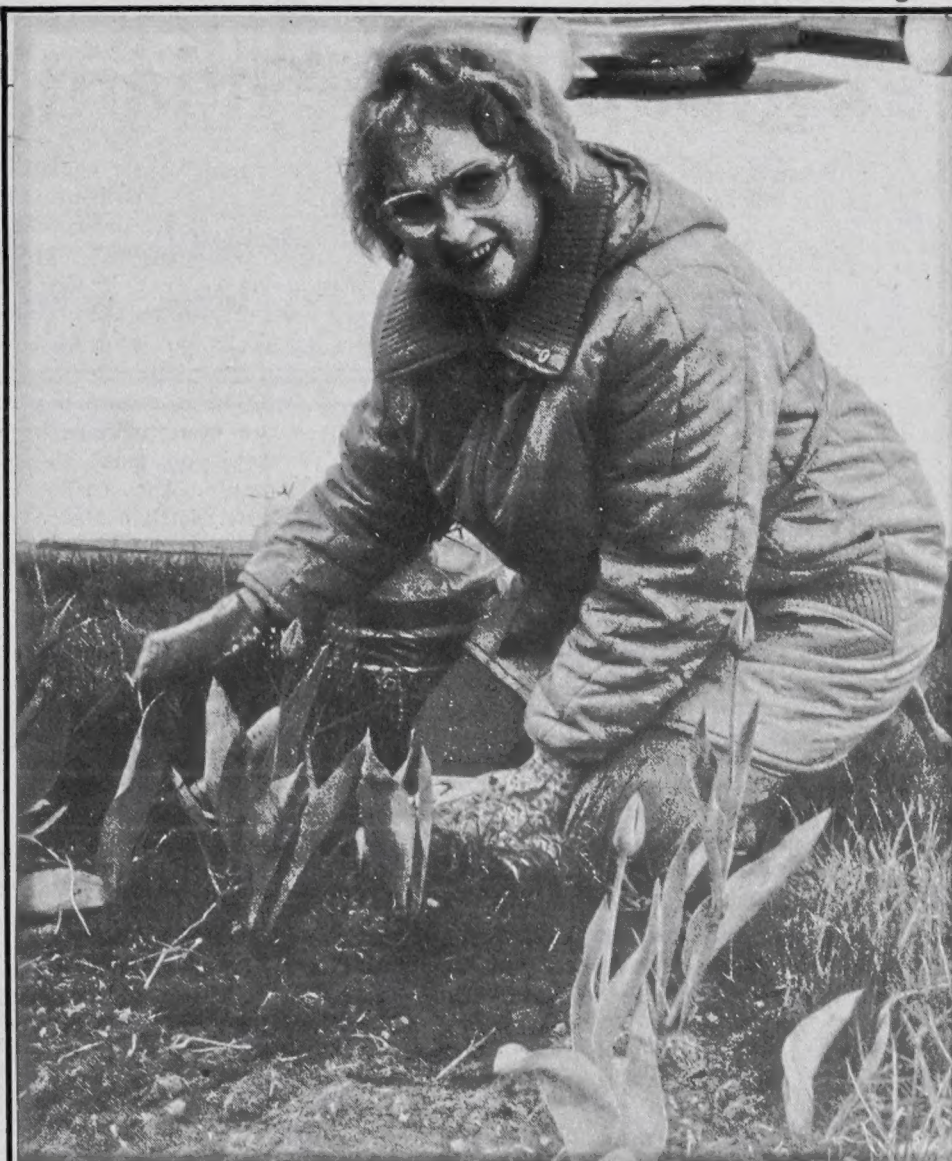

Pettes also faced charges for two incidents of impaired driving, on May 11 and June 9, 1990.

Crown Attorney Rick Bagg recommended a total six years driver's licence suspension for both of the charges.

However, Judge Inrig ordered a one year suspension for the first charge, and a two year suspension for the second.

The judge also handed down a 14 day concurrent sentence for the first offence, which included a charge of refusing a breath sample, and a 30 day concurrent sentence for the second impaired driving charge.

As well, Pettes is restricted from possessing any firearms for a period of 10 years.

Will be missed

Ray Moore's decision to resign as Minden's reeve is both regrettable and understandable.

Although his outspoken manner and strong opinions were often the cause of conflict around the council table, the dedication and energy he brought to the council table will be missed.

Some might disagree with Moore's vision for the community, but there is no question that it is a vision borne from his genuine affection for the municipality and its citizens.

The fact that Moore feels his health will not allow him to complete the remaining six months of this term is an indication of the increasing pressure facing our local elected officials.

While Haliburton County continues to grow and mature, municipal politicians are finding more of their time and efforts taken up by endless committee and council meetings and many hours of preparation.

The demands placed on the "part-time", volunteer councillors have already become more than most people can endure.

For this reason, we are concerned about the potential emergence of seasonal resident candidates in this November's election.

While we support the right of cottagers to take an active role in local politics, and encourage their participation, we doubt that someone can fulfill the obligation of public office while living 250 km away.

John Birnbaum, a member of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations who teaches seasonal residents how to run election campaigns, says candidates must be able to attend one or two meetings a week.

The truth is, councillors spend a great deal more time at their duties and find themselves on-call seven days a week.

Haliburton County needs dedicated hard-working politicians who represent all residents, seasonal and permanent.

It does not need absentee politicians.

Kooky cookery perfect for black fly season

If you get a dinner invitation from Bruno Comby, phone him up right away and tell him you can't make it. Tell him your gerbil died, tell him your hair fell out, tell him you're having a stomach transplant that evening -- tell him anything, but don't show up at his place at suppertime.

Unless you're a gastronomic adventurer of the first water.

Why? Well, Bruno Comby is author of a new book called Delicieux Insectes.

There now. You don't have to be Yves Fortier to figure out what the book's about, do you? Delicious Insects we'd call it in English. Bruno Comby writes about the pleasures of eating bugs.

Black 'n White

by Arthur Black

But before we croon "Yuk!" in two-part harmony, let's think about it for a moment.

Number one: We're obviously doing something wrong in the food department right now, because millions of people on the planet are going hungry.

Number two: Vegetarians say that part of the problem is our addiction to meat. They have some telling statistics. Such as the fact that the acre of land it takes to feed one calf could be used to raise 5,000 pounds of potatoes.

Ah, but that's several light years from sitting down to a plate plateful of creepy crawlies, isn't it? It's one thing to munch tofu burgers with a divot of alfalfa sprouts on the side; it's something else to face down a forkful of fricasseed cicada wings or french-fried June bugs.

But again, let's take a deep breath and think about it. Other cultures prize insects as rare taste treats. In Papua-New Guinea, certain species of ants are the piece de resistance at important feasts. In

Drivers take care as motorcyclists hit the road

Editor:

To most Canadians the month of May is the first real signs of spring with cool nights and many beautiful warm days for outside work.

For motorcyclists, it is the time of year that riders on two wheels brings back fond memories of past years' fun and a time once again to watch out for all other vehicles.

In Canada, the Motorcycle and Moped Industry as well as the Canadian Motorcycle Association have lobbied our government to proclaim May as Motorcycle Awareness Month. It is a time when most motorcyclists will once again be on the road and as motorcyclists we would ask the motoring public in four wheel vehicles to keep a sharp eye for that single or double headlight of the two wheel vehicle.

For the next six or seven months, Canadian roads will be dotted with motorcycles. On behalf of all two wheel riders and their passengers I would like to ask all drivers to be especially patient when making a left turn across a road or highway when a motorcycle is approaching at the same time. Two wheels cannot stop as quickly as four.

Respectfully,
Bob Mann,
Stanhope Township.

Firing of clerk will cost taxpayers

Editor:

It seems obvious now that the Demolition Trio are still trying to make unsensible decisions. First of all you do not allow articles to appear in the paper concerning the dismissal of Mary Mysyk.

It is one thing to dismiss or fire an employee, however it is frowned upon when you try to ruin their future career. This is going to cost the Taxpayers dearly. Yes, I have read the article in the May 6th, 1991 issue of The Times. I also read where you are advertising for a Clerk-Treasurer/Tax Collector by June 14th, 1991.

I ask the Demolition Trio, who in their right mind is going to apply for this position, who are worth their salt, with all the adverse publicity the Township is getting.

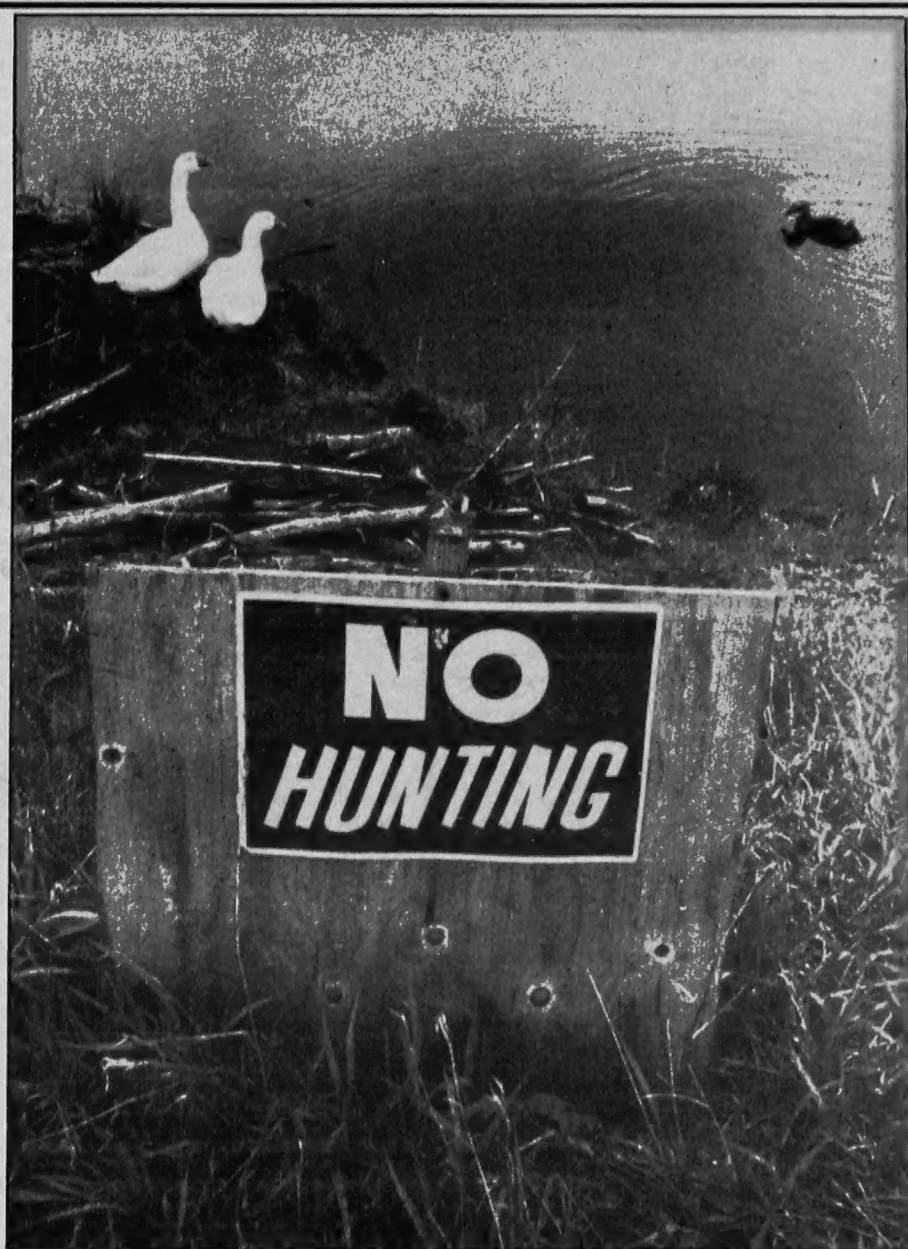

Have you guys ever heard of the Golden Handshake deal or do you even know what diplomacy is?

I beg you for the benefit of the Taxpayers, please hold off hiring a new clerk until the new Council is elected this fall. Hire someone on a short term contract for five or six months.

Let us decide, because two of you were involved in the hiring in the first place, now don't attempt to make another mistake twice or did someone upset the so called Chief Administrative Officer Bern Berry?

I warned the Council in writing before I was dismissed.

Respectfully submitted,
Bradley Bradamore,
Minden.

These high protein meals will bug fussy eaters

South Africa, moth caterpillars are considered a delicacy. Other cultures around the world lick their lips at the thought of locusts, flies, termites, and crickets.

"The idea of eating insects seems a little startling in a civilization where they are not eaten" writes Comby. That's putting it mildly, Bruno. Where I come from, the idea of eating insects is enough to get you tarred and feathered and ridden out of town on a Vapona No Pest strip.

It's blasphemous but it's not unheard of. There's a bottle of Mexican liqueur in my cupboard that has a larva floating around in the bottom of it. Right beside the bottle is a jar of jellied ants somebody gave me for my birthday last year.

Mind you, both of them are unopened.

Then there's the protein argument. Chicken is 23 per cent protein. Locusts and grasshoppers contain a whopping 75 per cent.

Which brings up another good reason for turning our knives and forks on insects: biologists acknowledge that insects are our biggest competitors for food and fiber -- why not cut out the middleman and go head to ... antennae?

Consider: large swarms of locusts regularly strip crops in the Third World, bringing famine and death. Normally we call that a plague.

Why not call it dinner?

A large swarm containing 400 billion locusts, would render down to nearly 10,000 tons of solid protein.

Besides, according to an Oregon University entomologist, we North Americans are already eating bugs -- about two pounds worth each, annually. The bugs are in our processed food, ground up into invisibly small chunks in everything from strawberry jam to frozen broccoli.

Why fight it? Heck, my front porch light attracts enough bugs to keep me in protein for a month or two. Then of course there's always pretty good pickin's on the car grille.

Sure! All it takes is an attitude change! Pass those candied bumblebees over here.

What's the matter? You've heard of Humbugs haven't you?

Out of Africa: Literacy training program takes retired teacher to the Gambia

by Susan Grober

Clarence McInerney was as a teacher all his life, but his biggest challenge has been in working with people in a small country in Africa.

McInerney and his wife, Jean, recently returned from the Gambia, a country on the west side of Africa on the coast of the Atlantic Ocean.

"We were glad to get home," McInerney told members of the HAVE (Help A Village Effort) committee at a meeting last Thursday.

The 78-year-old Minden resident worked with 144 teachers at 21 schools during his three month stay.

The main focus was dealing with a Primary One Education Program, where there is great difficulty in first teaching the children to read.

"If they don't learn to read then, they'll never learn to read," said McInerney.

The Republic of the Gambia is the smallest country on the continent, and has a population of 900,000. People speak native tongues, the English is the official language. The literacy rate is only 12 per cent.

The couple left in early January, and returned at the end of March. They stayed in a room at the home of a friend, who is the director of the American school there.

"Everything was piled with books and teaching aids," said McInerney. "But we had the run of the house, and we did our collating on the dining room table."

McInerney worked with $32,200, raised through donations from teachers' groups and HAVE concerts, and matched by the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA).

A total of $40,000 was actually raised, and the $7,800 that is left will be used toward a project in three other African regions which are in dire need of help.

"They've got no resources, that's the trouble," he said. "There are schools that have got one book, one reader. They're begging for chalk, they're begging for blackboard paint, and bristol board and cardboard."

Supplies were ordered in October, but didn't arrive until the end of March. "Jean and I really had to improvise," said McInerney.

Using the supplies they had, the couple came up with some unique teaching methods.

Many of the students didn't even have a rudimentary grasp of reading and writing. Of 100 words, some couldn't even identify three or four.

"The children couldn't read what they'd written, or what the teacher had written on the board," said McInerney.

The couple would make up a sentence for every word, and a sentence for every sound. "They don't use an alphabet like

Training in the Gambia is frustrating work

ABC, they use the sounds," he said.

To teach the children the phrase, a blue plate, a sentence would be made up for each sound: A, BL, UE, PL, ATE, said McInerney. "For every sound, we had a sentence written up on a card of bristol board."

Children are taught by rote in Gambia, a method which hasn't proven to be very successful.

"They tell the students, 'The book is on the table. The book is on the table.' So the kids are looking out the window saying, 'The book is on the table. The book is on the table.'"

If the student is asked to identify something from the lesson afterward, "he's liable to say book, he's liable to say on, he's liable to say anything because he didn't learn anything."

McInerney said there are two methods used to test the students, either on 20 words or 10 sentences. "But they have to read the sentence backward, to know they know the word on sight."

The reader used, called Gambia Book One, is designed for African children and change for each country on the continent. The book is printed in Hong Kong, but couldn't be shipped once the war in the Persian Gulf began, he said.

Illiteracy in the country can't be blamed on the teachers, said McInerney. "It's the fault of the system. The children don't start school until they are eight years old, because the schools are so full they are bulging."

Students spend six years in the primary school system, and then go on to high school if they have a passing grade.

"Only 50 per cent might pass, but if they have enough places then they lower the mark to let more through to high school," said McInerney.

"They have a total of 10 years in school, but they are poor readers when they get out. Their command of English isn't the best."

One member of the HAVE Committee,

Caroline Bishop, asked what the rationale is in teaching the students to read and write in English, rather than their own native language.

"There are problems with that," said McInerney. "Some learn to read and write only in their native language. There's talk about teaching them the native language first, and then going onto the English."

"Eventually they have to learn English. It's the official language."

Jean McInerney said the natives can't get good jobs if they don't learn English.

"You couldn't become a teacher, you couldn't get a job in a hotel, you couldn't write an exam, because it's all in English," she said.

English is the only language spoken in the classroom, but "as soon as class is out, the teachers all talk tribal language," said her husband. Many of the students come home to families who speak no English.

McInerney said the progress of his work in Gambia was slow, but it was obvious there were good results.

"I feel that we did quite a bit when we were there. The teachers need more academic background, but it's not their fault. They have no books."

Still, "I'm hoping this class won't be as illiterate as some of the other grades. They need a great deal of help, but they are survivors."

Because the literacy rate is so low, it's difficult spreading information to the adults of Gambia.

"They have signs that say mother's milk is best, but if they can't read it, what good does it do?" said McInerney.

The poor economy of the country means books and school supplies aren't the only items in demand. Medicine and food are also needed.

"How can you teach hungry children?" asked HAVE member John Dennys. "How can they learn?"

The life expectancy in the country is about 35 years of age. And 20 per cent of the children die before the age of five.

"They die of dysentery and malaria. The malnutrition is terrible. There is no economic base, and they have no foreign exchange to buy anything," told The Times in an interview on Friday.

McInerney was first asked by the Canadian Teachers' Federation to go to Gambia to train teachers in 1985. He returned in 1989, when he was asked to lead the program at 30 schools in the country.

"The first time I was there, in 1985, I was in a lecture hall with 78 people in it, teaching science," he said. "It was kind of hard teaching science, a program I believe in, in that kind of hall."

This was quite a change from his experiences teaching in Minden and Haliburton. In North America, most classrooms have a little more than 20 students.

He said the program was started by Dalhousie University, which received a grant over a five-year period from the Canadian International Development Agency.

And, although CIDA matches half of all money collected, McInerney feels not enough funds are provided for school supplies.

The overall lack of funds make the job rather discouraging.

"It's a little depressing, really," said McInerney. "You know you can't do everything. You do a little, but you can't do nearly enough. That's the trouble."

If more money can be raised, the program will continue. But Jean and Clarence McInerney won't return to Africa.

"No, we're through," he said. "It takes too much out of you, time-wise, financially, and health-wise."

McInerney will look for a replacement to teach methodology to teachers and to distribute school supplies. And he doesn't think it will be difficult to find someone in this area.

"You always find do-gooders in the teaching profession," he says.

In the meantime, McInerney would like to see the structure of funding changed to put more stress on the purchase of school supplies.

"If you train a carpenter and send him up north with no hammer and saw, he can't do anything. It's the same with teachers. They (CIDA) don't take the argument, but I think it's sound."

Woman drove while impaired, had no licence

The following cases were heard by Judge George Inrig in provincial court in Minden last Wednesday. Rick Bagg acted as Crown Attorney.

Cottager jailed for fleeing from OPP

A cottager from Caledon will serve a 61-day jail sentence intermittently on weekends for an incident where he sped through a RIDE program while impaired after police requested him to stop.

Last February 2, Robert Martin Hall, 27 approached a RIDE check on Highway 118 in Haliburton, near Sir Sandford Fleming College.

A Minden OPP constable noticed Hall's pickup slow down as it came to the RIDE check, and then eventually speed up. The constable warned the other officers to watch out, and then the truck sped past at up to 30 km an hour, said Crown Attorney Rick Bagg.

Hall headed west on Highway 118 and tried to turn into the Northwood Inn parking lot but missed the driveway. He then turned in at the nearby apartment building and stopped the truck in the middle of the parking lot.

The OPP officer gave chase with all the car's lights flashing, and had to drive 160 km per hour to catch up with Hall, said Bagg.

Hall was arrested, and told police "All right, you got me," said Bagg. Then Hall made a comment that he wasn't the driver. Later, Hall told police he ran through the RIDE check because he had an unpaid fine.

Two breathalyzer tests determined he had 155 mg and 147 mg of alcohol in 100 ml of blood. The legal limit is 80 mg.

Hall's defence lawyer said the accused thought police were waving him through the RIDE program, rather than motioning for him to stop. He also said Hall was driving less than 30 km per hour.

"Did he continue to think he was being waved through when the cruiser was behind him?" asked Judge Inrig.

The lawyer said the police officer wasn't directly behind because it took him a while to catch up to Hall, who drove one kilometre from the RIDE site.

In the courts

The lawyer said incarceration for the offences would be "extremely excessive" because Hall was polite and co-operative with police, and has an "exemplary" record with not even a parking ticket.

Bagg disagreed, saying a number of aggravating factors put these comments in dispute. "He was not co-operative, he lied to police at first, saying he wasn't the driver."

Judge Inrig added that if Hall has no record, then he couldn't have been concerned about an unpaid fine.

"I think under the circumstances, incarceration is necessary," said Judge Inrig.

He first sentenced Hall to 30 days, but when the man asked for an intermittent sentence the judge increased it to 61 days. The term was doubled because extra credit for two whole days is given for checking into the jail Friday at 8 p.m., and checking out Monday at 6 a.m.

Hall will be on probation until the sentence is served.

Impaired driver loses licence

A 38-year-old Haliburton man who pleaded guilty to impaired driving will pay $500 and is prohibited from driving for one year.

Richard D. Hart was stopped at a RIDE check while driving southbound on Highway 118 in Dysart on April 28, 1990.

Crown Attorney Rick Bagg suggested a steep fine because Hart's breathalyzer readings were high at 250 mg and 255 mg. The legal limit is 80 mg in 100 ml of blood.

Prowler fined $300

A Bancroft man who pleaded guilty to trespassing at night after he was caught prowling on private property was fined $300 and placed on one year probation.

Last March 11, 25-year-old Timothy

John Taylor was seen walking toward the seniors' residence in Anson Township by a man who was taking medicine in his kitchen at 5 a.m.

The man checked into the matter because there had been problems in the neighbourhood. He saw Taylor, who appeared to be trying to open the door of a vehicle, said Crown Attorney Rick Bagg.

The man phoned police, who checked into the matter and asked Taylor if he had a car parked in the area. "None of your business," Taylor replied. "Go search for it."

Taylor was arrested, and a screwdriver was found in his pocket.

Bagg said Taylor has an old record. In 1982 in Bancroft, he was convicted of possession of stolen property, in 1983 he was convicted of theft under $1,000, and in 1984 he was convicted of possession of narcotics in Lindsay, and break and enter.

Bagg suggested Taylor be placed on one year probation, and ordered to pay a $500 fine.

"It's a bit much to fit my budget right now," said Taylor, asking if it could be lowered.

So Judge Inrig fined Taylor $300, and gave him 90 days to pay.

Snowmobiler was impaired

A man who was impaired while operating a snowmobile won't be driving any vehicles for a year.

Andris John Udris, 28, who works in Markham, pleaded guilty to impaired driving on January 12.

That day, he was followed by a police officer while operating a Yamaha snowmobile in Monmouth on County Road 4 because the vehicle had no taillights.

The constable followed at a 90 to 100 km per hour speed for two km, until Udris turned onto a Paudash trail and wiped out.

Two breathalyzer tests determined Udris had 162 mg and 148 mg in 100 ml of blood.

Crown Attorney Rick Bagg suggested a $400 to $500 fine.

Udris objected. "I didn't think I was drunk, because I'd only had six or seven beers throughout the day."

"Impaired driving does not mean drunk, it means your abilities are not good enough to handle driving," said Judge George Inrig.

Udris was fined $400, and his driver's licence was suspended for one year.

Guilty plea to 11 break-ins

A 22-year-old Gooderham man pleaded guilty to 11 charges stemming from a string of cottage break-ins in Glamorgan Township last summer and fall.

Gregory Wayne Riel was charged with break, enter and theft at eight different cottages, and break, enter with the intent to commit theft at three cottages from August 1 to October 29, 1990.

Most of the break-ins occurred in October.

Judge George Inrig declined to hear the facts regarding the occurrences until a pre-sentence report is ordered.

The matter was adjourned for sentencing on July 10.

Drove drunk with no licence

The only reason a 20-year-old Haliburton woman won't lose her licence for impaired driving is that she never had a licence.

Elma J. Hie was fined $400 and prohibited from driving for one year after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

On March 9, Hie was followed by police as she drove from the Harvest restaurant at 10:50 p.m. She drove north on Highway 118, into Haliburton Village, and turned east on Park Street.

Hie was apprehended by police after she stopped left of centre at a stop sign, half way out into the intersection, said Crown Attorney Rick Bagg.

Two breathalyzer tests determined Hie had 185 mg and 174 mg of alcohol in 100 ml of blood. The legal limit is 80 mg.

She told the court she didn't have a driver's licence at the time.

Cottager bites back Man plays barking dog tape, faces 20 counts of mischief

by Susan Grober

A man charged with 20 counts of mischief to property says enjoyment of his Monmouth cottage has gone to the dogs.

Aron W. Johnson, 36, pleaded guilty on all counts before Provincial Court Judge George Inrig in Minden on April 24. He was charged with willfully interfering with lawful use, enjoyment, or operation of the properties of two neighbouring couples on a private road near Esson Lake.

The charges were laid after the couples complained that Johnson and his wife, Heather M. Clarry, played a tape of dogs barking on a few weekends during the course of the summer of 1989.

In June 1989, Johnson made a tape recording of his neighbours' dogs barking, said Crown Attorney Rick Bagg.

On a few dates from June 23 to July 1, the tape was played on the deck of Johnson's cottage at a loud volume, causing the neighbours' dogs to bark back and howl for several hours.

Johnson's neighbours, who are full-time residents, were then forced to bring their dogs inside their homes, said Bagg.

"I didn't really mean to cause any harm," said Johnson. "My intention was not perverse, but instructional. Their dogs do bark incessantly... It was just a non-violent way to help them see what they've subjected us to in the last five years."

Johnson, a census commissioner for Statistics Canada, said he's had bad relations with his neighbours, and hopes to sell his cottage by the summer.

He noted he has no criminal record, and has two university degrees — a bachelor of arts and a master divinity degree.

Johnson currently volunteers as a probation officer at Scarborough West Correction Centre. "My ambition is to become a probation officer, which would be severely impeded depending on the charges today," he said.

Johnson asked for a conditional discharge. "I've been through enough on this matter," he said.

Johnson brought the tape recording of the barking dogs, but Judge Inrig declined to listen.

"Barking dogs can be a nuisance, but returning the same kind of nuisance isn't the way to go (about solving the problem)," said the judge.

Judge Inrig granted the conditional discharge, and told Johnson to have no contact with the two couples.

Minden dumps closed to non-residents in August

Starting in August, residents of Anson, Hindon and Minden will have to have an identity card to use the municipalities' landfill sites.

Last Thursday, council approved the system and ratepayers will receive their dump cards in June when they get their property tax bills.

Although he agreed the move is necessary, Councillor Lewis Stevens expressed concerns that not enough time was given to inform residents about the change.

"There was not much chance for people to give their comments, pro and con," said Stevens. "How many taxpayers know about this?"

"I think the (public utilities) committee had to go that way, but the taxpayers should have been given more lead-in time to get used to the idea."

Stevens said that the proposal was discussed by the committee on several different occasions, but had only been brought up at council one other time.

"If it doesn't work, we'll take it back," said Deputy-Reeve Mike Maher. He said the municipality has to do something to protect the life-expectancy of the landfill sites.

By enacting the card system, council hopes to stop residents from outside the municipality using the landfills.

Possible problems could arise with people who live outside Anson, Hindon and Minden but shop in the village and use the Scotch Line landfill. Maher suggested that some arrangement will have to be made, perhaps with other municipipalities, to address these concerns.

It was also suggested that temporary passes could be issued to contractors based outside the township who are working on a site inside Anson, Hindon and Minden.

Councillors feel betrayed Stanhope berates reeve and deputy for voting against budget review

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Saying they feel "betrayed" Stanhope councillors have criticized the reeve and deputy-reeve for not supporting a full review of the 1991 county budget, despite a council resolution to do so.

"We spent a lot of time commenting on the budget and passed a resolution requesting our representatives take it back and review it," Councillor Murray Daniels told Reeve Harry Davis and Deputy-reeve Ann Barker at last Wednesday's council meeting. "You didn't follow this and it bothers me. We, as council, said take it back and review it and you did not review it."

Stanhope council joined Minden, Dysart and Snowdon and passed a resolution at the April meeting asking for a review of the county's budget in an attempt to reduce the 35.7 per cent increase in the property tax levy.

While the representatives from Snowdon, Minden and Dysart all voted to re-open the budget, Davis and Barker supported the majority of county councillors who voted to retain the current levy.

"I was surprised and shocked to see the reeve and deputy-reeve voted against it," said Councillor Elinor Harrison. "It shook my faith in democracy and it scares me a little."

With major issues like economic development, waste management and restructuring facing the county, Harrison questioned the effectiveness of Stanhope council's efforts to represent the ratepayers of the township. She said unless the reeve and deputy-reeve support the council's position at the county, councillors are wasting their time discussing county-related issues.

"It makes a mockery of the local council," said Harrison. If council passes a resolution giving the reeve and deputy-reeve a direction to follow at county council, Harrison said there is a moral obligation to support that resolution.

Harrison says she has a lot of respect for Snowdon Reeve George Simmons, who voted to re-open the county budget in accordance with the wishes of his councillors even though he did not personally agree with their position.

In their defense, Barker and Davis said the county's budget committee did undertake a review of the budget at the April 17 meeting, but saw no use in re-opening the budget because the members could not find anything to cut.

"To have made a cut of 10 per cent, we would have to take $160,000 off the budget," said Davis. "Where would we have taken it from, you tell me."

"We could only cut the roads budget," he said. "We already cut $1 million from there. If we'd cut another $160,000, you might as well close down the roads department."

But Daniels said he doesn't think the county should be spending money just to attract provincial government grants, especially in the case of the county's economic development office. "It would be better to give the money to the Chamber of Commerce."

Davis read from a list containing levy increases from other counties and regions in the province. A majority of the increases were in the 20 per cent range, but Davis said other counties borrowed from their reserves to reduce the tax increase and didn't experience the same rise in welfare costs that Haliburton County did.

He also said that it would be illegal to re-open the budget at this point.

Barker said she felt the issue is not settled and will likely appear back on the county's agenda.

The addition to Minden's Toronto Dominion Bank received a firm under-pinning last week as workmen completed the footing work. The hollow steel pilings were driven 80 feet into the soil then filled with cement to hold the new structure in place. The 900 square foot expansion is expected to be completed by mid summer.

Player eager to face Soviets in Montreal match

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Like many young hockey players, Minden resident Dan Jordan dreams of being able to face off against a team from the Soviet Union.

Unlike other players however, Jordan will not have to wait to make the NHL or Team Canada to get that chance.

This weekend Jordan will play the Moscow Dynamo in an exhibition game at a tournament in Montreal.

"I'm really excited about playing the Soviets," said Jordan. "When I sleep, all I think about is playing the Moscow Dynamo."

Jordan, who is 10-years-old, is playing on a Triple-A Major Novice team called the Central Ontario Selects, based in Lindsay.

The team, which started skating in April, will play a number of weekend tournaments during the summer, including this weekend's event in Montreal and a tournament in Ottawa during the Canada Day weekend.

Jordan's father, Jerry, saw a try-out notice for the Selects at the Minden arena and suggested his son sign up. After competing with 44 other skaters and enduring five grueling try-outs, Jordan earned one of 16 openings on the team.

"I was kind of scared," says Jordan. "I didn't think they would keep calling me back and I didn't want to be cut."

The pace set by coach Doug Baumken is challenging. Jordan played centre last winter with the OMHA Minden Novice team, but has found himself on left wing with the Selects.

"I'm learning a lot, a lot of new moves. Every game I learn a whole lot," he says. "It's pretty fun, but not as good as centre."

Right now though, all he concentrates on is the game against the young Soviet players. Although the two teams are both competing in the tournament, they only would have played each other if both teams made it to the final.

After numerous phone calls to the Soviet authorities, Baumken was able to set up an exhibition game between the Selects and the Dynamo on Friday.

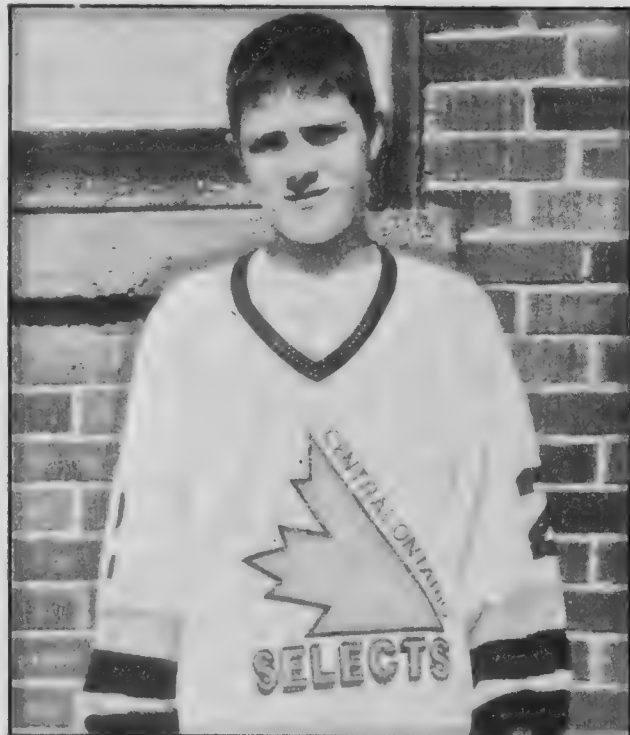

Jordan says he expects the Soviet players will make formidable opponents. "I think they'll be faster and probably more aggressive," he says.

After the nation anthems are played, the two teams will meet at centre ice to say hello and exchange gifts.

And although he's too young to remember Paul Henderson's historic goal in 1972, Jordan is caught in the spirit of international competition.

"It's the best thing, playing the Russians," he says. "It will be like playing for Team Canada."

Dan Jordan looks forward to facing off against the Soviet Union in hockey this weekend.

Crown requests up to 60 days for employee who stole

(from page 10)

Cashier stole from Jug City

A former Westside Jug City cashier who stole cash and lottery tickets worth a total of $11.20 may face 30 to 60 days in jail.

A surveillance camera taped Susan Edith Roberts, 23, last month while she was working the till alone at the Haliburton Village milk store.

Crown Attorney Rick Bagg told the court that on April 20, Roberts voided $5.60 from a refund for a package of cigarettes, and took $1.60 in cash and two Scratch and Win lottery tickets worth $2 each. The next day, she did the same thing.

Roberts pleaded guilty to the two charges of theft under $1,000. She has a previous conviction for a similar charge.

"She's looking at a jail term," said Bagg, adding that the occurrences showed a breach of trust.

A pre-sentence report was ordered. Roberts returns to court for sentencing on July 10.

Man can't possess firearms for one month

A Cardiff man charged with careless storage of firearms received a suspended sentence and one year probation.

Police attended at the home of Edgar Schunk on April 23, for an unrelated matter, and found a loaded .22 calibre Mossberger rifle and 12-gauge shotgun out in the open. Three other firearms, one loaded, were also found by police on an open gunrack in Schunk's home.

"All the guns were in plain sight," said Crown Attorney Rick Bagg. "There was no attempt to secure them."

Schunk said the guns were loaded because porcupines were eating away at his woodshed. "I never would have left them that way if children were in the house."

Schunk said a warning from the police officer should have been enough, because he was not aware that gun restrictions also pertained to storage of the firearms in his own home. "This is a law I did not know of," he said.

Bagg explained that guns are often stolen from homes, and sold on the black market. "It's common when people don't secure their guns, they become unlawful guns used for crimes in the community," he said.

During his term of probation, Schunk may not possess any firearms or explosives. He has 30 days to instruct an authorized person to hold the guns for him over the next year. Otherwise, the police will destroy the weapons.

Community service for stealing pop

A 16-year-old youth pleaded guilty to stealing a case of 24 cans of Coke as an employee of Dollo's IGA in Minden.

The youth, who cannot be identified under the Young Offenders Act, was seen standing behind a tree, placing an object on the ground, and running into a store by a police constable at 8:20 p.m. on March 22.

The officer seized the pop and went into the IGA, where the youth was working at the time. The Coke was worth $9.99.

"Do you think anybody's going to hire you if you steal from them?" asked Judge George Inrig, who then the youth's father if there are any problems with him at home.

The father replied that the theft was the first incident.

Crown Attorney said the matter was a breach of trust because the youth stole from his employer. He said normally a term in jail would be recommended, but asked for probation and 150 hours of community service instead.

Judge Inrig sentenced the youth to one year probation, and 80 hours of community service.

Main Street locale requested for community policing building

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Minden's Community Policing Committee is trying to establish a village police office on a piece of municipally-owned property on Main Street.

Committee chairman Doug Campbell made a presentation to Minden council last Thursday, outlining a proposal to build a small police office on the 25-square-foot vacant lot between the CIBC and Northland Footwear.

"It's just ideal for the type of office the community policeman needs," said Campbell.

The volunteer committee met for the first time last Monday to discuss the issue of finding a suitable location for Constable Mark McMaster, Minden's community officer.

The municipality, which is responsible for providing an office for McMaster, has offered space in either the firehall on Pritchard Lane or the basement of the municipal building.

Because of their distance from Main Street, and the lack of visibility, the committee members do not feel either location is suitable.

"If we don't keep a high profile, the reception will be less than it should," said Campbell. By placing the office in the centre of town, it would be in the area with the most activity, he said. "The key here is that he be out there and accessible so he can talk to the individual tax payer."

The committee has proposed a building with a 10-square-foot office, a reception area about the same size and a washroom. Campbell said all the necessary services, such as water, sewer and hydro, are all available at the site.

Campbell said that until the building can be built, the committee has suggested renting space in one of the downtown buildings, such as Sunny Variety, for about a two-month period.

Reeve Bern Berry said there has been some discussion over the past couple of years of the CIBC expanding its existing building on the proposed site of the police office.

He also addressed the concern about the cost of the office. "To put the building up and provide heat and telephone will require big dollars," he said. "Dysart supplied a building they own which is not on the main street and no farther than the firehall."

Berry also said he saw no difference between Sunny Variety and the firehall, "except a few steps, and a lot of dollars."

Deputy-Reeve Mike Maher said he liked the idea of using the property beside the bank and suggested the committee might be able to use the abandoned Boy Scout building currently located near the arena.

Although the building is not wired or insulated, Maher said it would provide a start to the office. He said the Boy Scout building will have to be moved anyway, once construction on the new county office begins.

Councillor Lewis Stevens supported Maher's suggestion and said it might be better if McMaster was stationed in the firehall until the Main Street building is ready for occupancy, rather than trying to rent space for a short time.

In order to get McMaster on the street as quickly as possible, Councillor Bob Sisson also suggested using the firehall in the short-term.

"There is a fear that once you're in the firehall, you'll never get out and it's a genuine fear," said Maher. But he said that if McMaster started in the firehall he could be moved to a better location when one is ready.

The $300 or $400 a month needed to rent space downtown could go towards the cost of new building, Maher said. "But if it has to be Sunny's, then it has to be."

Council gave Campbell approval, in principle, to investigate the various options discussed and how much money each one will involve.

Notes from Staannworth Court

We finally have all our Snowbirds home. Len and Mable Trodd arrived a couple of weeks ago and Mark and Carrie Vasey made it back this week. Len Trodd left Mable to do the unpacking while he started in on the "back-lot" garden, preparing it for the planting. Plans for the summer barbeques have also been discussed and the smoke will surely rise on the first warm Wednesday.

Mel and Doris Foster have returned from a five day bus tour around interesting spots in Ohio. A highlight was discovering Amish Country and enjoying a special dinner. The Warther Museum in Dover displaying hand carved steam locomotives and trains was also a highlight of their trip.

The tenants are all co-operating in selling tickets for the Canine Vision program (Training of Seeing-Eye Dogs). Jean Marsh has donated the first prize of a hand-made quilt and a donation of a gallon of maple syrup as second prize has sweetened the pot.

Sylvia Howard is looking after the tickets. All the proceeds will go to support this worthwhile project. We are all looking forward to the visit of a Trainer and a Seeing Eye Dog to Staannworth Court at the end of May.

Some of our tenants are joining in the upcoming Senior Games and we will keep you posted on their progress (or lack of!) in upcoming issues.

Here's A Thought: Someone has said membership in every organization is made up of four kinds of "bones".

1. There are the Wish Bones who spend time wishing someone else would do all the work!

2. There are the Jaw Bones who do all the talking but little else.

3. There are the Knuckle Bones who knock everything that anyone tries to do.

4. And finally there are the Back Bones who get under the load and do the work.

TO WHICH GROUP DO YOU BELONG?

New system helps hearing

by Donna K.M. Pacey, Haliburton County Home Support.

Through a grant from the Trillium Foundation, Haliburton County Home Support Services has been able to obtain an Infra Red Hearing System to aid those who are hard of hearing at conferences and receptions.

The system comes equipped with several ear phones which give the wearer the freedom to sit anywhere in the conference hall or reception and be able to hear the event. The unit is available for rental for organizations throughout the County of Haliburton. The fee is $25 in the vicinity of the Village of Haliburton and $30 elsewhere in the county, prices include GST. Please call Sherron Sisson at 457-2171 for further information. Our volunteers will set up and take down the unit for you.

Please not elsewhere in this newspaper the notice for our Annual General Meeting on May 31, 1991. We hope you are planning to attend.

As you read this, the seniors in the County of Haliburton will be joining the seniors of the Province of Ontario in the Ontario Senior Games. The Ontario Senior Games consists of card games, bowling, golf, tennis, darts, horseshoes, shuffleboard, walking and a triathlon. Muskoka and Haliburton will be sharing the finals this year with the Awards Luncheon being held in the Village of Haliburton at the Royal Canadian Legion. We wish each and every participant the very best of luck.

Lutterworth Reeve Carol Puffer admires a Bulova watch presented to her at the last council meeting.

Puffer honoured for her role as warden

by Susan Grober

Lutterworth Reeve Carol Puffer got quite a pleasant surprise last Tuesday when fellow councillors presented her with a gift in honour of her role as the county's warden.

Puffer received the brightly wrapped box from Councillor Maurice Boyd. Inside was an engraved watch.

"It's really beautiful," said a visibly moved Puffer. "Believe it or not, I'm speechless."

"That's a first," joked Councillor Bill Valentine.

"Now you'll have no excuse to be late for any meeting," said Councillor Lisa Mercer.

Puffer was selected as warden of Haliburton County last December. This is her first term as Lutterworth's reeve.

Budget puts people first, says NDP

On April 29, the new government brought in its first budget for the province of Ontario. I am very proud of a budget that puts the needs of the people first in these hard times. For example, we are cutting taxes for families on low incomes by $50 million dollars. For the agricultural sector, and of particular interest to Victoria-Haliburton, we have committed almost $90 million dollars for farm assistance. Funding for protecting women and children against family violence has increased by 33 per cent.

We will provide the economic stimulus to create 70,000 new jobs. This government is making a major investment in affordable housing with 35,000 units to be developed this year and another 10,000 to come. This will provide a major boost to the construction industry. As well, we will invest 4.3 billion in essential public facilities such as building schools, hospitals and transportation systems. This will also help drive the economy and provide jobs.

To help those hard hit by the recession, the province will initiate a $175 million dollar Employee Wage Protection Program. We will provide up to $56 million dollars in loans to small and medium size manufacturing firms struggling through hard times.

Drainville Diary A report from Queen's Park

With Dennis Drainville, MPP

One of the most important aspects of this budget is that we have stopped down loading programs onto municipalities. The province will now pay for its own programs. The responsibility rests with us, not on the backs of our hard pressed municipalities. For example, we have more than doubled funding of municipal recycling programs, and reforms to social assistance will relieve some of the pressure on local municipalities facing spiraling welfare costs.

Your provincial government is committed to fighting the recession, but not at the expense of programs and services to help people in genuine need. Nor will we allow education or health care to suffer. Rather, we have chosen to provide assistance where needed and provide employment through important public works.

Much debate has focused on the size of the projected deficit. However, it is important to remember that of the $9.7 billion dollar deficit, only $1.5 billion is new spending. Lower revenues, the impact of the federal government cut-backs in transfer payments and higher welfare costs account for $5 billion dollars of the deficit. Another $3.2 billion dollars will be used to maintain existing programs and services, (i.e. schools, hospitals, roads, etc.) Finally, only a small portion of the deficit, about $1.5 billion dollars, results from new programs put into place by this government. In other words, if we spent not one cent in the new programs and services, Ontario would still face a deficit of $8.2 billion dollars, brought on by factors out of our control; the recession and the cuts in funding from the federal government.

Though we have chosen to let the deficit rise this year in order to fight the recession, we do take it very seriously. Our three-year plan sets the province on a course to bring the deficit down as the economy recovers. By 1998 we will eliminate the operating deficit for this province.

This is an aggressive recession fighting budget.

It will help the people of Victoria-Haliburton and the entire province build sustainable prosperity for the future.

Hart Lodge has a new manager

A recent change in ownership at Hart Lodge has been followed by a change in management. Earlier this year it was announced that Granite Resorts of Toronto had purchased a portion of the popular resort complex north of Minden. This past week the newly structured company announced the appointment of Shirley Kuni to the position of general manager at Hart Lodge.

Mrs. Kuni will be replacing John Mateer as resort manager. Mr. Mateer, who has been part owner of the property for a number of years, will be moving to the Granite Resorts' head office in Toronto while continuing his association with the local resort. His responsibilities with the company will include sales and marketing of the Minden area resort as well as the other six Granite properties in Ontario.

Included in that list of resorts is Windermere House, Edenvale Inn, Paignton House and Lakeside Lodge, all in the Muskoka area, Ben Miller Inn in Goderich and the Gananoque Inn located in Gananoque.

Mrs. Kuni is well known in the Minden area as the former owner of My Size clothing store in this community. She has also been an owner of Ruby's Cottage Resort, north of Carnarvon, and the Wild Goose Inn on Highway 60 near Algonquin Park.

Her appointment to the position of general manager is effective immediately.

The heart of Hart Lodge

Shirley Kuni has taken over as general manager at Hart Lodge while John Mateer has assumed marketing responsibilities with Granite Resorts of Toronto.

Highland Games to join pollution revolution by compacting The Times into cabers

Storyteller and monster hunter John Batt recently announced that Jamie McPure, the Ontario pollution fighter, has agreed to patrol the Haliburton Highland Games. As Ontario's only licenced, independent pollution fighter, Jamie will be bringing his Pollution Prober to the games at Glebe Park to zap would-be polluters on June 21 and 22. Batt said Jamie will be accompanied by his partner in the pollution revolution "The Kompactor Kid".

The Kid is well known for his huge feet which he uses to stomp on recyclable materials to press them into manageable sizes for transportation. These Kompacted bundles will be sent after the Highland Games to the duo's plant manager "Recycle Michael" near Toronto. The Kompactor Kid has agreed to use old copies of the Minden Times to Kompact into Cabers for the caber tossing contests and old iron nails into hammers to be put into competition at the Games on June 21 and 22.

Jamie McPure said, "The only swords we want to see at the games are to be used in the sword dance. If the Ninja Turtles try to appear and start throwing pizzas around they will get zapped with my Pollution Prober's green laser-like ray." Storyteller Batt said the Kompactor Kid is eager to see the hammer throw and the tug-of-war. "He likens the tug-of-war with polluters. Their pollution campaign is to recycle, reuse, reduce and compost whereas the opposition insist on using the same materials to pollute." Batt said Recycle Michael remarked "Our opposition is Bad real Bad."

A Success Story

North Steel has certainly come a long way since its beginning as a two-man operation. Local entrepreneur Hans Walter has just moved the business to a new location in Lochlin. Today it employs 16 people.

by Susan Grober

Hans Walter sits back in his office and reflects on the business he started with his wife, Erika, at an old farm in Ingoldsby.

The couple lived at the farm since emigrating from Germany in 1985, and Walter saw an opportunity in the area for warehousing and selling steel, and in structural steel fabrication.

"That's where we started out, and we had a good time," he says. "Of course, business was booming in Canada then, and there was a lot of building in Haliburton County."

It was five years ago, in April of 1986, when Walter started North Steel. "It was a two-man operation, just my wife and myself."

Today there are 16 people on the payroll, and the business just relocated in a new building in Lochlin a month ago, on April 8.

Walter and his employees at North Steel have worked on such projects as the Heritage Plaza in Minden, the new Stedmans in Haliburton, and the expansions of the PineStone Inn and Peterborough Civic Hospital.

But the biggest challenge the successful entrepreneur has overcome was finding a new location to expand his business.

Time for changes

Walter and his wife hoped to relocate North Steel on property they purchased across from the farm they rented from a man living in Germany.

Earlier last year, Minden Council gave Walter support in his endeavour to expand in its municipality by passing a site specific industrial rezoning. Then a group of property owners appealed the decision.

"The worst disappointment I ever had was when the Canning Lake Cottagers' Association objected to the building," says Walter.

The relocation plan came to a halt. At the appeal hearing last October, the Ontario Municipal Board postponed its decision on the rezoning because it was passed under the municipality's new comprehensive zoning bylaw, which has four appeals against it.

Throughout the rezoning process, Walter steadfastly maintained he has a clean business. The steel is not forged on site — only cut, fitted and welded. There is little waste, not much noise, and no pollution to harm the surrounding lake and bother area property owners.

Time passed and Walter's problem

Angle grinding is just one of the many jobs Ivor Davies performs in the shop at North Steel in Lochlin, in his capacity as a fitter and fabricator of steel products. Here the sparks fly as Davies works on a bridge for Head Lake Park in Haliburton.

wasn't being resolved.

Those who made the appeal suggested Minden council should search out an alternative location for Walter. The businessman wasn't pleased with the outcome.

"I was really disappointed by Minden councillors themselves, that they were not able to find me a proper location so I could build my business. My lease on the old place was over at the end of March this year, and I needed to switch."

Time was a crucial element to Walter. So he went to Snowdon Reeve George Simmons for help. It proved to be a smart move.

"He looked around, and I'm happy to say that he found this property here for me," says Walter. "After two weeks, he said, 'Here, go and build.' The reeve and council of Snowdon supported me very much to get a building up in time."

The red-trimmed, white building is located beside the baseball diamond at the Lochlin Community Centre. At 7,000 square feet, with 1,200 square feet of office space, there is room for further expansion in the future. A maintenance building at the back is 900 square feet.

Construction of the building began last September, and was completed in March.

Meanwhile, the Ontario Municipal Board has yet to make a decision on the rezoning appeals, made by Albert Cavan, Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Lloyd, and the Canning Lake Cottagers' Association.

However, that's no longer Walter's concern.

"If Minden wants this property rezoned, fine. But I'm happy with this place now," he says.

Building bridges, and more

The shop at North Steel is clean and expansive. A steel bridge under work now for Head Lake Park in Haliburton stretches across one end to the other. Ivor Davies — who does fitting and fabricating in the shop — is angle grinding on the bridge.

Sparks fly as the machinery touches the steel.

Despite the recession, the employees at North Steel are kept busy. That includes those who work in the shop, on the road, and in the office doing drafting and design.

(more on page 38)

Company struggles through recession

As the company's name became more well-known, Walter began to get contracts in such areas as Lindsay, Peterborough, Orillia, Barrie, Bracebridge, and Muskoka.

Walter says this is because there aren't many who offer the service in the surrounding area. The nearest businesses are in Lindsay and Orillia.

"If you do structural steel in Canada, you must be certified by the Canadian Welding Bureau, and there are not many who are licenced. The licence fees are really high."

After applying for the licence, an inspector is sent to watch as test plates are done. The plates are then taken to Toronto, where it's determined whether the test was a pass or fail.

An inspector from the bureau also comes once a month to check out the employees, and to ensure all the equipment is up-to-date.

At present, North Steel employs six licenced welders. Walter himself has no background in welding.

"From the beginning, it wasn't our intention to get into this business. But more and more people thought we should do fabrication," he says.

"I'm the type of person who, if I see something I can do, or see a way to develop a company and get it going, I try to do it and make the best out of it."

He started out with selling and warehousing steel, and after the first year hired two or three people.

"Then all of a sudden our name was known all over the place," says Walter.

The building business was booming, and North Steel snowballed. "It was a good time for us to get this business going."

Two years ago, in 1989, saw the most progress as the business jumped from five employees up to 12 within a year.

"We got many orders in, and had a big job in Peterborough for nine months with the hospital expansion. We had to use all our manpower, and sometimes had eight people working steadily in Peterborough. So we needed more people for other contracts."

Changes were certainly coming quickly since North Steel's first job, doing the steel work for the reconstruction of the Stedmans building which burned down in Haliburton.

The PineStone expansion job in 1988 included an impressive skywalk which connected the inn's two main buildings several feet off the ground. And the company works on smaller buildings. "Whatever came along," Walter says.

New competition cuts deep

Business has slowed down recently. "We have a recession, there's no question about it," says Walter.

Although there's enough work in the area, North Steel now has competition from Toronto companies which are cutting their prices and searching out jobs up north.

"Our prices are not high, but these other companies are desperate for work. Even with the higher wages in Toronto, they take the jobs very, very low, just to keep their businesses going. And that's our problem now."

North Steel's competitors in Orillia and Lindsay also have to live with this stiff competition.

Walter stresses he isn't afraid of competition. "I don't mind battling with the competition, as long as it's fair. But the market is not steady, and their prices are too low to compete. It's not fair anymore."

Many of the companies which are cutting their prices are also cutting corners on job sites, Walter says with distaste.

"If you want to buy cheap, you get cheap. We want to keep our good name, and our good standard, going in the market. We are called back to the jobs from our customers because we do good work, and we want to work in the future, too."

Walter says his employees take pride in their work. "They say it's better to spend more time and do it right instead of cutting corners."

The new building has a capacity for at least 10 people in the shop, and about 22 employees altogether, including those out on the road who work on-site.

But he's not in a position to hire any more people in the immediate future.

"Right now, I'm really happy if this year I can keep going with the 16 people I have," he says.

The importance of industry

Other than tourism, there are few industries in Haliburton County. Those industries which do survive find that some local attitudes make it a struggle.

Walter felt that when he attempted to expand his business in Minden. "If Minden council really wanted me in Minden, they would have looked for a place for me," he says.

Another former Minden businessman faced a similar problem. Gerry Vandenberg of Applied Stress Technology applied to rezone the Blairhampton property where both his home and business were located.

Council agreed to the rezoning. Neighbouring property owners appealed. Tired of waiting, Vandenberg took his business elsewhere — Dysart's industrial park, to be exact.

Walter feels negative attitudes toward industry are killing the local economy. The county must look toward industries which have markets in other areas.

"What we need here are more industrial outfits," he says. "All the people here rely on each other. We need an outfit that is making things that are not meant to be sold in this area, so it doesn't matter if people here can't afford to buy it or not."

For example, the General Motors in Oshawa doesn't depend on the local economy to sell its product. The vehicles are produced to be sold outside of Oshawa.

"The industrial park in Haliburton is filled with locals who depend on each other to survive, like electricians and carpenters. If the money isn't there, the first business can't spend, and then the second has no work."

Just one company at a central location in the county could boost employment in all points of the county, says Walter.

"Haliburton County should be big enough to find an industrial park without hurting the lakes or the environment... If we have an industrial company here to employ 250 to 300 people it would make a big change. Then there would be more money to spend in the stores."

A recently released study commissioned by the Haliburton County Development Corporation examined why some local residents shop outside of the county.

The study suggested that local merchants could offer a wider selection of products. But Walter says this is unrealistic to some degree, because it is costly for merchants to stock a wide variety of items.

Trade versus tourism

Walter says Haliburton must become more self-sufficient, rather than rely on tourists to bring in money.

"It makes me mad when politicians say we need to live from tourism. If the weather is bad, the tourists stay away. As nice as it is to have nice country and lakes, we need more. We have to change our attitudes."

People expect more from life than they did 30 or 40 years ago, says Walter. They want nice homes, cars and other amenities.

"All the young people, the good ones, leave the area to look for jobs. That's why we need industry here. The young people should stay."

Walter can't say what's holding the county back from making changes. "I don't know what it is. I guess it's old-minded attitudes. But I feel a little bit of a change is coming up."

As a supporter of progressive change, he's pleased with the formation of a task force to implement recommendations of the county's Economic Development Strategy. "That should get things going."

Before coming to the country, from an area near Stuttgart, Walter worked as a salesman for a steel mill.

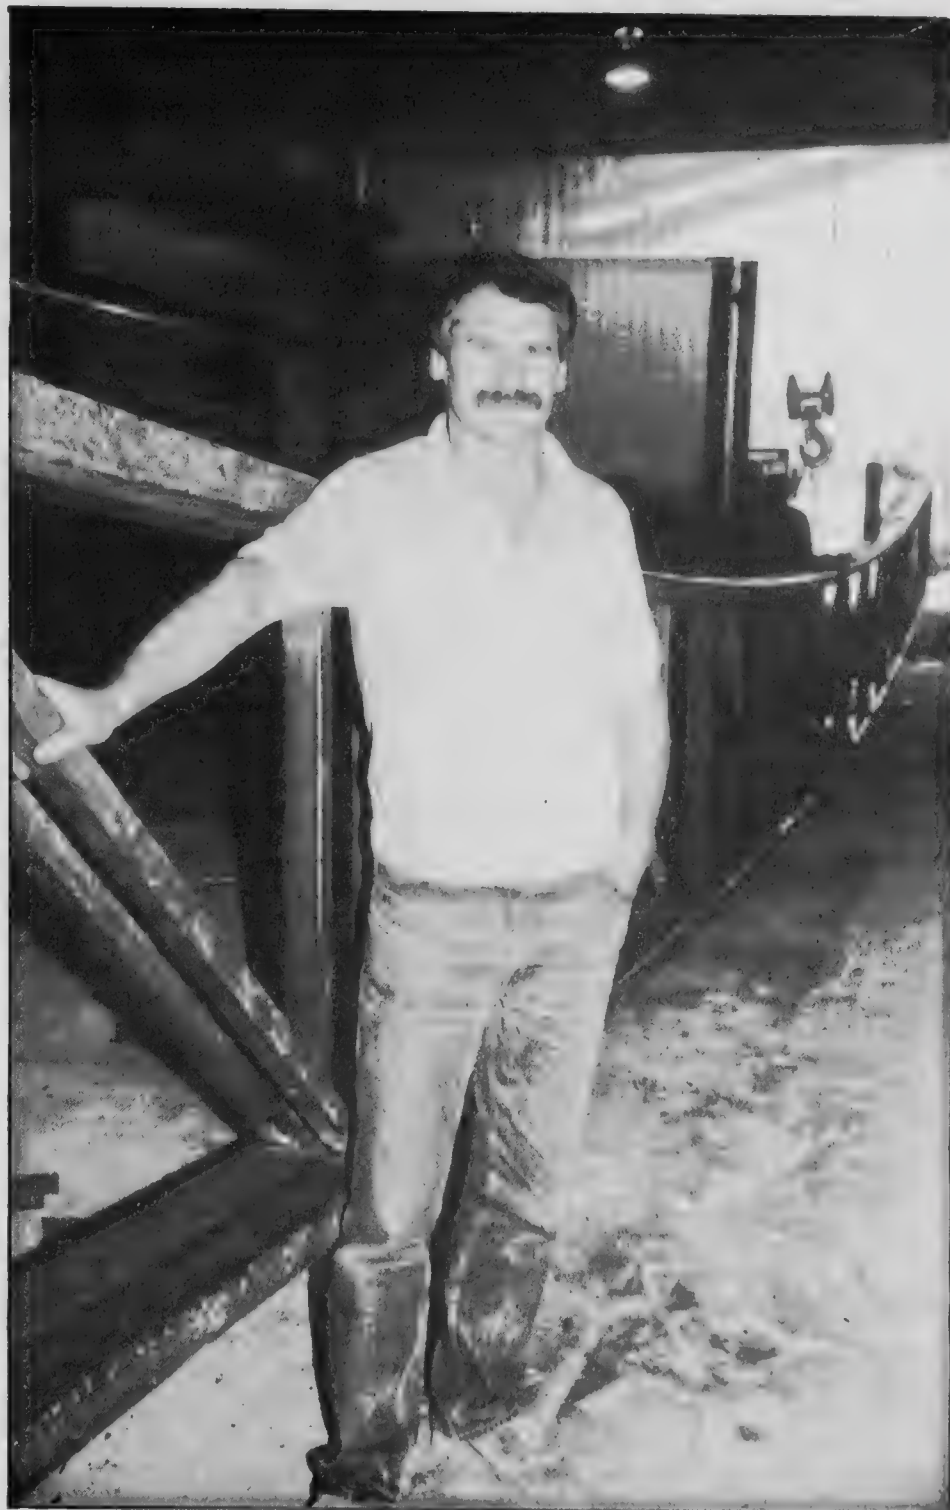

"It makes me mad when politicians say we need to live from tourism," says Hans Walter. "If we have an industrial company here to employ 250 people, it would make a big change. Then there would be more money to spend in the stores."

When asked why he came to Canada he says, "To relax," and then laughs.

"No, the reason I came to Canada was I wanted to see something else. I took a chance, and came to Canada to see what I could find here."

Walter is positive about his future here. "I don't really blacken the future, because Canada is a growing country. There are so many opportunities, especially in Haliburton County. We just have to go through this recession right now."

"Life always has its ups and downs. Life is down right now, but soon it will go up."

Rev. Burgess welcomed back to Sunday service

Saturday is really visitors' day. We have very few activities but quite a few residents have visitors. About the same Sundays, except we have Chapel Service in the evening. Reverend John Burgess has resumed this service after a serious operation. He is not too strong yet, but is able to take the Sunday Service and we welcome him back. Alice Jones played the organ. Thanks Rev. Burgess and Alice.

Monday Evelyn Coleman had Bible Study with us. Our study was from the parable of the house built on sand one built on rock and the man with a speck in his eye and a beam in his own. Thank you heartily Evelyn.

Hyland Crest Auxiliary meeting was held in the auditorium. They are getting us new card tables and we thank them very much.

Monday evening Tom McAllister showed films for us. We enjoyed them very much. One was "Land of the Loon" and the other was "The Last Moose Skin Boat". We had a few more residents than usual to watch the movies. Thank you Tom.

Alfie Richardson was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital on Tuesday, April 30. We hope is soon feeling better.

Sunday, April 27, Bob Mitchell's whole family was here for a party in the auditorium, in Bob's honour. It was a very pleasant occasion. Bob hasn't been very well lately.

Tuesday Chapel Service was held by Rev. Brian Parker followed by Communion Service. The residents thank him greatly.

Tuesday afternoon we went to Bracebridge for a bus drive. The driver was Terry Barnum and Linda Fry with Janke Thomas' help, looked after the residents. Thank you Linda, Janke and Terry for a nice afternoon. The wind was very strong but we enjoyed the day.

It would be greatly appreciated if some members of the residents' families could do some volunteer work to relieve those faithful members of the auxiliary who do so much for our home and comfort, but we are your family. The residents, I am sure, would love to know their families were with them helping when they can.

Margaret Robinson has transferred to Bracebridge.

Thursday we had our usual Tea Party. The ladies of the Loyal Orange Lodge of Minden provided a lovely lunch. It was served by Gladys Wruth, Gloria Cameron and Mary Cox, with help to provide it by Joyce Hewitt, Shirley Horsley and Edna Trumbull. When we finished lunch, Linda Fry played guitar and we had a sing-song. We thank the ladies of the Loyal Orange Benevolent Lodge for the lovely tea, and Linda, Cindy and Janke for the sing-song.

We have another girl in the kitchen, Debbie Fletcher since Chantelle McKnight is off to college. Good luck Chantelle.

We have a short stay resident, Mina Thompson. New residents are Charlie Welsh and Mary Currah.

Thursday night we gathered for bingo again. There are a few more joining us, which surely is pleasing. May Horsley has been with us about three times and another surprise, Ethel Shaw came last night. We were happy to have them, also to have the callers, Marg. Prentice, Nancy Briggs and Sheila Carrell who we sincerely thank.

Friday was Happy Hour with Gordon Kidd singing and playing the guitar, but he was only able to play for an hour, because of his work. Everyone enjoyed his entertainment and thank him very much. Don Holden was pressed into playing a few pieces on the piano which were delightful. Volunteers for today were Don and Ellen Holden, Mary Guillemain, Bonnie Fullan, under the direction of Linda Fry and Rose Smith. Rose finished employment here today, she has been part-time while Doris was away on sick leave, and returns to work on Monday.

Businesses required to register

All unincorporated businesses operating under names other than their owners' are now required to have their names registered. Ontario's new Business Names Act, 1989, proclaimed today includes companies in the previously-exempt service industry.

Past laws regulating business names applied only to those in manufacturing, trade or mining. Businesses such as consultants, hairdressers and building contractors were not required to register. But under the new act, they must register their business names by November 30, 1991, with the Companies Branch of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations (MCCR). The new act also applies to business names used by corporations.

"This new legislation will better protect consumers and businesses in Ontario," said Consumer and Commercial Relations Minister Marilyn Churley. "They will have easier access to information about businesses which they deal. This type of information is particularly important to people trying to settle disputes".

Through registration, business names are placed in public files maintained by the Companies Branch. This allows consumers and other interested parties to find the owners behind a name. Anyone may search business-name information contained on the public record for a fee.

The new legislation also provides for legal recourse in cases where damages are suffered as a result of deceptively similar business names. Registering does not in itself give someone exclusive use to a name. But registrants who feel they have suffered damages because someone else registered and used the same name or one that is much the same can take legal action. The act provides for compensation if damages are proven.

Companies with names already on record under the old legislation don't need to re-register until their five-year registration period has expired.

Chamber examines Muskoka's formula for success

It is always encouraging to find out how other areas similar to ours successfully promote themselves. On April 30th at the invitation of Barry Dobson, President of the Muskoka Tourism Board, Robyn Jarvis, Lyn Stevens, Rhonda Elstone, Godfrey Saunders and Bob Stinson traveled to the Muskoka's and found out why this neighbouring region is so successful. It is even more encouraging to find out that Muskoka Municipal politicians realize the importance of Tourism and are ready to invest in its promotion.

Six years ago there wasn't

From the Chamber

by Shawn Hagerman

any coordinated effort to promote the Muskoka's as a travel destination area. Barry, who was a Minister of Tourism Consultant, agreed to take a two year absence and get the project started. The District of Muskoka initially put in $150,000 a year. They later agreed to fund $30,000 for a person to work on an event development and now have four major events including the National Triathlon Championships.

Municipal funding stands at over $240,000 per year and forms 40% of their overall budget. Their promotional activities includes a 64 page All Color Guide, a 24 page, Conference & Meeting Guide, and a four Seasons What's Happening Guide. A Muskoka trademark has been registered and they are now producing a product line of hats, clothing and pendants which are being distributed by local merchants.

Muskoka is now, not only maintaining, but increasing its market share of its tourism industry.

It is truly a credit to Barry, his five staff and the co-operative efforts of the farsighted Muskoka politicians who, working together, have made the Muskoka's the favoured destination area for many people.

As well, in these recessionary times, they are not sitting on their laurels. They plan on accelerating their marketing strategy through even more co-op advertising and distribution of members' brochures. Our Chamber would like to thank Barry for sharing his vision and strategies with us. Their Tourism Board is a model of co-operation that could benefit all of us here.

Kids' Korner

by Jean Lacey

Hi Kids!

Here is another puzzle for you with a word list. Look in the diagram of letters for the words given in the list. Find them by reading up, down forward, backward and diagonally. They are all in a straight line and do not skip letters. Circle the words in the diagram and cross it off the list.

It's as easy as that. Have fun!

Q. What steps should you take if a lion is chasing you?

A. Long ones.

Q. What is more useful after it is broken?

A. An egg.

Q. Why is a baseball like a stack of pancakes?

A. They both depend on the batter.

Q. When is a spider like a baseball player?

A. When it catches flies.

Q. Why did the orange stop in the middle of the road?

A. Because it was out of juice.

Cloud forest holds many intriguing species

There are few happy endings in the global struggle to save wilderness from the relentless pressures of poverty, overpopulation, shortsightedness and greed. On a recent trip to Central America, I learned of a delightful story with a happy outcome. And children played a key role.

The account begins high in the swirling mists of the Tilaran Mountains of northwestern Costa Rica. People paid little attention to a bright orange toad that lived in the remote forest. But 13-year-old Jerry James did and reported them to Jay Savage, a visiting frog expert in 1962. When Jerry brought a toad, its colour was so extraordinary that Savage believed the boy had painted it. So Jerry helped Savage collect the animals himself and two years later, they were identified as a brand new species, Bufo Perigienes, known locally as the "golden toad."

Because of the toad, a small area around its habitat was designed as the Monteverde Cloud Forest Preserve. But like Brazil, Costa Rica allowed people to claim land simply by clearing it. As logging, burning and mining pressed in on Monteverde, a group of landowners, farmers and biologists realized that the Preserve had to be enlarged to protect other animals like tapirs and the spectacular bird called the Quetzal.

So in 1986, the Monteverde Conservation league, a private, nonprofit group was formed to buy land as a buffer around the Preserve. They appealed to conservation groups in other countries and raised enough money to buy 6,559 hectares of primary forest, more than doubling the area of the Preserve.

Canadian naturalist Adrian Forsythe wrote an article in EQUINOX that year describing the venture and suggesting that $40 would buy an acre of cloud forest. It was a concept that environmentalists knew instantly was a great idea. In 1987 I took part in a fund-raising event for Monteverde at the University of Toronto and the ambience in the packed audience was electric as people contributed $43,000. Ontario Environment Minister, Jim Bradley gave $10,000 on behalf of the province's citizens, a symbol of our stake in the forests of distant lands. The Canadian effort, supported by the World Wildlife Fund, raised over $350,000 which biologists at Monteverde assured me helped to stop a very destructive road through the Preserve.

In 1987, children in a small primary school in rural Sweden began to study tropical rain forests. Nine-year-old Roland Tiensuu asked what he could do to protect them and the animals they supported.

Reflections

by David Suzuki

His question prompted his teacher, Eha Kern to invite a visiting American biologist, Sharon Kinsman, to talk to the class. Kinsman had studied in Costa Rica and showed slides of Monteverde which inspired Kern's class to raise enough money to buy six hectares of cloud forest. Kern and her husband then organized Barnes Regnskog (Children's Rain Forest) through which Swedish schoolchildren raised hundreds of thousands of dollars for Monteverde.

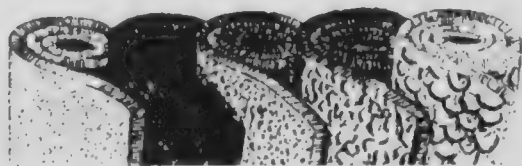

In 1988, Sharon Kinsman formed Children's Rainforest U.S. while Tina Joliffe of England established Children's Tropical Forests U.K. In 1989, Nippon Kodomo no Jungle (Children's Rainforest Japan) was created. With the involvement of children on an international scale, the Conservation League decided to buy forest specifically for children. Today, BOSQUE ETERNO DO LOS NINOS (Children's Eternal Forest) has almost 7,000 hectares with a longterm goal of over 16,000 hectares. Last year alone, children raised over a million dollars for the International Children's Forest at Monteverde.

Today, more land is still being purchased around Monteverde at $100 per 0.4 hectares. But it is just as important to provide money to protect the land that is already in the Preserve. Peasants around the Preserve must be educated about the value of wilderness to reduce poaching, illegal logging and squatters. Farmers are being taught to reforest their land, primarily as windbreaks that protect pasture and increase productivity of land already cultivated. The planted trees provide fence posts, lumber and firewood that would otherwise come out of the forest. The education program and tree nursery need funds. More guards and a radio telephone system are needed. The staff of the Children's Forest dream of building an education centre with an amphitheatre for young people from around the world.

Canadians can be proud of their role in Monteverde. And we can do more. Send contributions to the Monteverde Conservation League, Apartado 10165-1000, San Jose, Costa Rica, Central America.

It is an unlikely time of the year to be thinking about sled dog racing, however, there was one last piece of unfinished business to be taken care of before the season closed. The International Sled Dog Racing Association annually presents one of its members with the Don Martin Award, recognizing that individual's contribution to the sport. This year's recipient was Minden's Val Loughheed. ISDRA director Stu Brandon recently presented the chromed snow hook and plaque to Loughheed recognizing her many years of dedication to the sport through the local derby and internationally. The announcement of this year's recipient was made at the spring ISDRA convention held in Minneapolis, Minn. Sponsored by Martin Pet Foods of Elmira, the company also makes a $500 donation to ISDRA in the name of the individual receiving the award.

CARD OF THANKS

I would like to thank my personal Saviour Jesus; all the employees and Council of Anson, Hindon and Minden, the staff and Council of Haliburton County, the Rotary Club, the Westside Group, the W.I. and so many, many friends for their prayers, letters, cards, flowers and phone calls, during my recent setback while in Florida. Thanks to a wonderful family, who were there for mother Gloria and I without question for transportation, financial and consultation, so far from home. Thank you very much. May the Good Lord Bless You Abundantly.

Ray Moore

The Highlands Little Theatre would like to thank the following individuals and businesses for their generous assistance in our recent production of "Breath of Spring": The Minden Times, The Haliburton County Echo, Emmerson Rental, Gambell's Antiques, Nostalgia & Gifts, Paulette's Gifts & Collectibles, The Storeroom - Minden, Carol Feero of General Lee's - Haliburton, Ken & Marg Fielding of General Lee's - Minden, Joel Levis - Haliburton County Library, H.H.S.S. Custodial & Secretarial Staff, Charles O'Neil, Country Rose, Jasco Drug Mart, Haliburton County Resort Productions, Cordell Carpet & Interiors, Our Audience.

I would just like to take this opportunity to say a gigantic thank you to everyone who supported Fred while I was in hospital and recovering at home. To all who offered food, assistance with caring for our children, prayers, etc. etc. Thank you. Back at work and feeling fine. Thanks again.

Bess Cox

A very sincere thank you to our friends in Minden for the cards and letters following the death of my brother, Sandy Stewart, and my accident. It is so comforting to have caring friends at a time like this and I know Sandy would appreciate this too. We will all miss him very much and his late wife, Irene, who passed away February 7, 1990.
